This is the letter "c." The letter "c" says, "kuh," like in cat, candy, cow, coin and car.

The letter "c" looks like a snake curled around, trying to lick his tail.

What does the letter "c" say?
(Have the child make the letter "c" sound several times.)

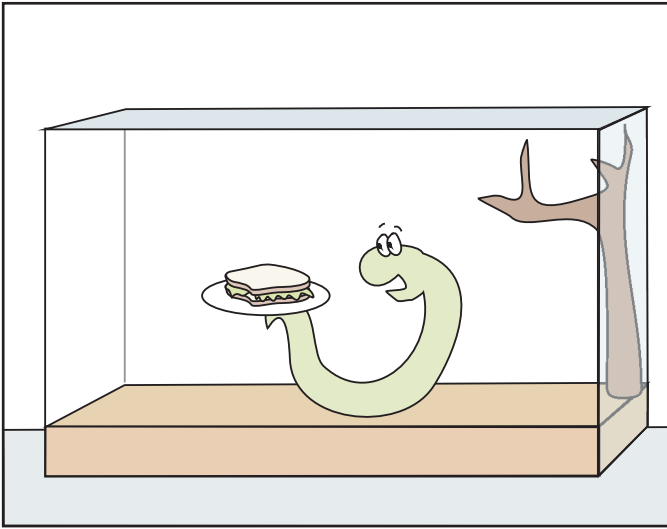

Let's use our hands to make the letter "c":

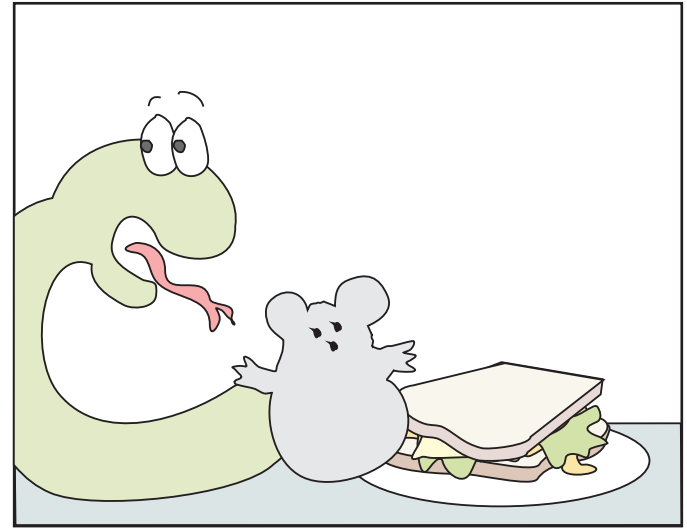

What does the letter "c" say?
("kuh!")

Here are two words we can make with the letter "c" — can you read them?

One day, sid makes a special sandwich for
ham, but ham
doesn't come to lunch.

"How sad," says sid to sis. "I made ham
a nice sandwich, and he isn't here to eat it."

The next day, ham
doesn't show up again.

"I am worried," says sid to sis. "Where is ham?"

sis can't speak, so
sid speaks for her.

"Maybe you should call
a cop."

“Excellent idea!” says
sid. “I am glad I thought of it. I will call a cop now.”

sid picks up the phone.
“Hmmm...” he says to himself. “What is the number to call a cop?”

sid taps a few numbers
and, by accident, calls the rabbit next door.

"Hello?" says the rabbit.

"Hello," says sid.

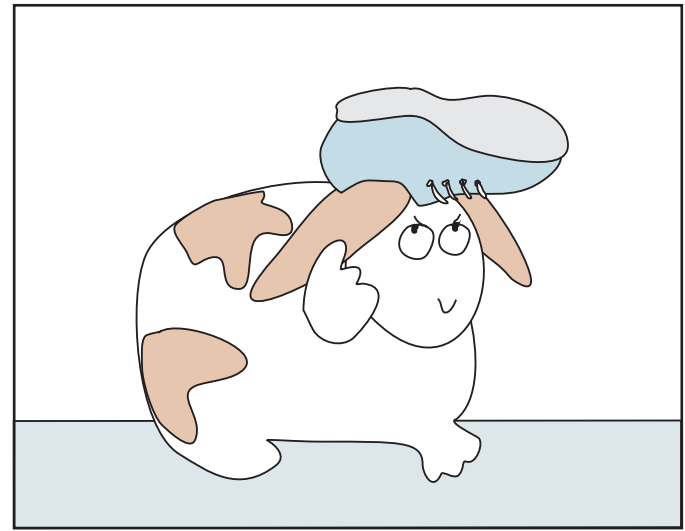

"I want to call a cop."

"I'll be right over," says
the rabbit next door.

Two minutes later, the rabbit knocks on the door.

"Hey," says sid, "you are not a cop."

"Oh, yes, I am a cop," says the rabbit.

"See? I have a cap on my head. A cop cap."

“That is not a cop
cap,” says sid.

“That is a shoe!”

“Of course it is a cop
cap,” says the rabbit.

“There must be something wrong with your eyes.

Now, how can I help?”

"My friend, ham the hamster, is missing," says sid. "I have not seen him in two days."

"Well, I see ham the hamster," says the rabbit. "Isn't that him over there?"

"Oh! There you are. Hello, ham," says sid.

"Hello, sid," says
ham. "I was visiting my aunt and uncle."

"Problem solved!" says the rabbit. "And all because you, sid, can't see anything at all."

"I will now take off my cop cap and put on my doctor cap
so that I can look at your eyes."

The rabbit puts a sock
on his head. "Aha!"
says the rabbit. "Just as I thought. You have elephants in your eyes."

The rabbit gives sid a bag of candy. "Take two of these and call me in the morning."

"Well, I really must be going. As the only cop in town—and the only doctor—I am very,
very busy. Goodbye."

sid takes a big

bite of candy. "Yum.

This is the best medicine I ever
tasted."

ham also takes a

big bite of candy.

"Yum. Maybe you should get sick more often!"
