This is the letter "r." The letter "r" says "-rrr-" like in rain, rabbit, ring, rocket and rhinoceros.

The letter "r" looks a lot like the letter "f," except that it is shorter and doesn't have a stick across the middle.

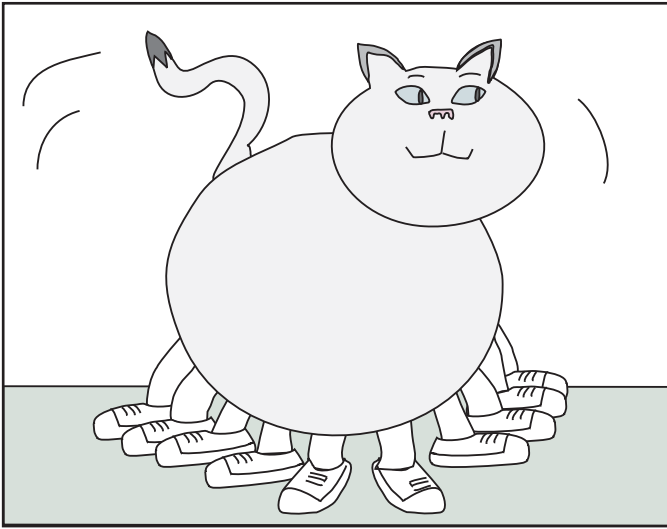

We can make the letter "r" with one hand.

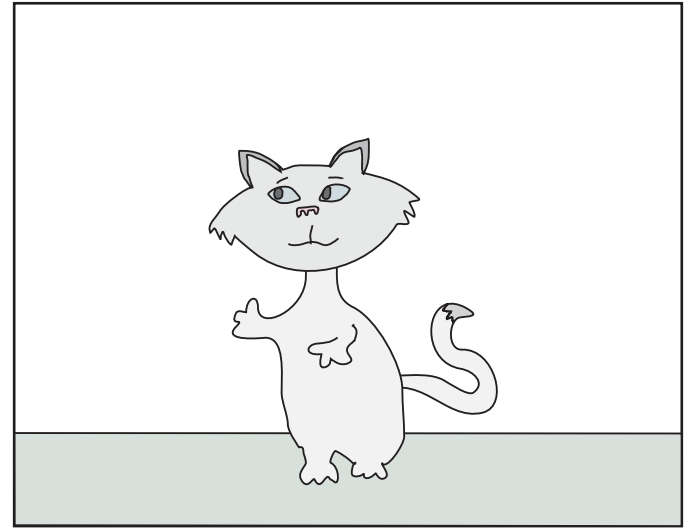

And what does the letter "r" say?
(Have the child make the letter "r" sound several times.)

There is one word in this book that uses the letter "r."
Can you read it?

“I am going outside
for a run – a nice,
fun run,” says
tom. “Want to come
with me?”

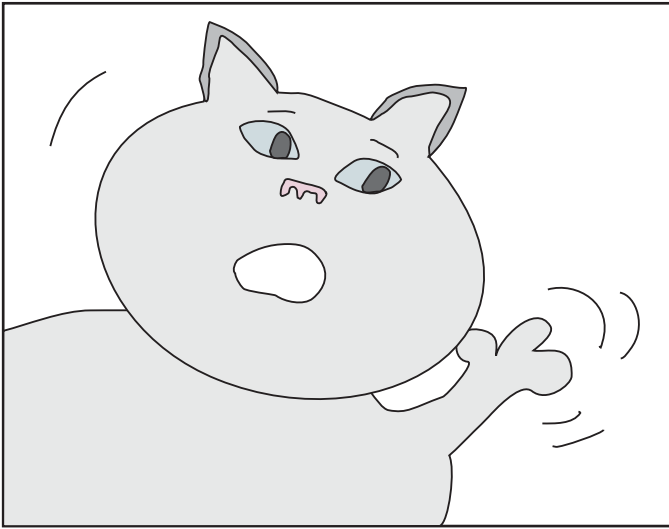

“No, thanks,” says tim.
“Going for a run is not fun. My feet always hurt after a
run.”

"Then wear a pair of my running shoes," says tom.
"I have ten feet, but I can run with just eight shoes."

tim puts on the shoes. "Oh, dear, they do not fit. They are too big."

tom scratches his head.

"Maybe you should put all your feet in one shoe.
Then maybe it will fit."

"This is not fun,"
says tim. "I cannot run - I can only
hop, hop, hop."

"I have an idea," says
tom. "You ride on my back, and I will
run. Okay?"

"Slow down!" says tim.
"This is not fun.
You run too fast!"

“Too fat?” tom stops and frowns. “I am not fat.
I am just a little bit big.”

“No, no, no,” says tim.
“I did not say you were fat. I said you were going too fast...
too quickly.”

"Sickly?!" says tom, stamping one or two of his feet. "I am not sickly. I am healthy -
big and healthy."

"You need your ears
checked," says tim.
"There is something wrong with your hearing."

"Earrings?" says tom.

"You need your eyes checked because I am not wearing any earrings."

"Aaaaaaah!" says tim.

I give up. We will talk about it another time."

“Want to run some more?” asks tom.
it is fun to run,
and I will be careful.”

“Wheeee!” says tim.
